Q2 2020

market review

Q2 was a story of resilience for the Seattle market. It began with our region fully entrenched in a new normal amidst the COVID-19 pandemic, but ended with a strong seller's market and historic low interest rates. Buyers have returned in droves to battle for the limited supply of homes for sale. With a shortage of listings due both to economic/health concerns and sellers who can't find anywhere to go, we could double our current supply of homes for sale and still fall short of demand.

Seattle's median sale price increased by 3.4% in Q2 to $780,000. Queen Anne-Magnolia (+7.7%) and South Seattle (+6.8%) were top performers in the Seattle region while the Richmond Beach-Shoreline area was down 0.6% compared to Q2 2019.

68% of Seattle homes (all price points) sold at or above their listed price, while only 15% of homes priced above $1 million did so. The average number of days to sell decreased to 20 from 27 in Q2 of the year prior. There were 21.1% fewer Seattle home sales in Q2 2020 (1,956) compared to Q2 2019 (2,479) due to a shortage of homes for sale.

The highest Seattle home sale was a 2008-built Laurelhurst (North Seattle) waterfront home for $10,500,000 and the lowest was a 1979-built 1-bedroom approved floating home in a leased slip on Lake Union for $134,000.
